ORIOLE HOODOO LINGERS OVER JOHN M'GRAW AS WORLD SERIES CHIEFTAN

By FREDERICK G. LIEB.

Can John McGraw, manager of the Giants, shake off the jinx which so relentlessly has pursued all graduates of the old Baltimore school of baseball in world series competition? That is the question of the hour. The defeats which have been administered in world series to teams piloted by former members of the famous Orioles have been uncanny in their regularity.

McGraw and his chief lieutenant, Hughie Jennings, alone have suffered seven world series defeats; Albert Robinson, the crack catcher of the old Baltimore champions, has lost both of his world series in Brooklyn; while "Kid" Gleason, pitcher and second baseman on the Orioles was leader of the White Sox when they went down to their infamous defeat in 1919.

This will be the seventh National League championship for John McGraw, a new record for big league managers. Prior to this year, McGraw and Mack were tied with six league championships. However, defeat in another world series would take much of the joy out of setting a new managerial record.

McGraw won his first world series in 1905, when the great Mathewson shut out the Athletics three times in a week. Since then teams led by New York's little Napoleon have been defeated by the Athletics in 1911, by the Red Sox in 1912, again by the Athletics in 1913, and by the White Sox in 1917.

The Giant leader is known to baseball as a snap judgment manager. In other words, he usually decides plays on the spur of the moment rather than mapping out a difficult campaign in advance. He is a hard driver of his players when things go bad, but when they are used to his whip on his present team the way he did with the three-time champions in 1911, 1912 and 1913. There were players on that club who did better when ridden hard, and McGraw used the whip and spoke freely.

They Respect Him.

Players on Giant teams, however, have the greatest respect for McGraw's leadership and knowledge of baseball. They may differ with his judgment at the time, but in the end will admit McGraw was right.

In Trip Speaker, the Indians have one of the most magnetic chieftains in baseball: a playing manager who can make his players work for him like Frank Chance of old. Speaker, however, is of a different type than the growly, old bear who used to lead the Cubs to victory in numerous pennant and world series wars. Personally Speaker is far more popular with the Indians than Chance ever was with the Chicago players. The reverence and love which the Cleveland players feel for the great "Spoke" seldom has had a counterpart in baseball.

Cleveland's great sport after Speaker's accident in St. Louis early in the month showed how the spirit of Trip could keep the Tribe in the winning column.

We've got to keep winning for Trip, said the battle cry of the Indians in the East.

He Showed Cleverness.

Speaker handled the Indians cleverly in the 1920 world series with Brooklyn, and continually kept his fighting team on its feet. He has met the Giants twice in post-season clashes. In 1909, when the Giants and Red Sox both finished third, Speaker met New York almost single-handed, while Trip was a factor in Boston's narrow victory over the Giants in the world series of 1912.

In the event that the Yankees win the American League pennant, and play the Giants, Miller Huggins, the midwest manager of the Yanks, will get his first opportunity to shine as a world series tactician.

Huggins has been subjected to much criticism in New York and is a better manager than he has been given credit for. There is a lot of baseball in that little head of his.

It is true, however, that Huggins lacks the magnetic personality of Speaker, and the aggressiveness of John McGraw. He is unable to inspire his team in the same way that these other leaders are able to do.

The hitting manager, however, has had his difficulties. He has had a team of stars to handle, men whom it was absolutely necessary to show on the ball field, and quite often he had been obliged to cater to the whims of his leading performers.

When Huggins has a team of cast-offs in St. Louis, it was much easier to be a strict disciplinarian than in New York, where he is surrounded with stars.

SCRIMMAGE DAY ORDERED FOR LOCAL GRID TEAMS

By BRYAN MORSE.

The day might properly be called "scrimmage day" for local college football teams. Arrangements have been completed whereby Catholic University and Gallaudet College teams and Maryland University and George Washington University eleven will battle for awhile. From off the Hilltop comes word that six eleven will tear into each other for quite a spell during the afternoon. Gallaudet is going over to the Hilltop and Maryland is coming to town.

The Brooklanders are making ready for their contest with Richmond College in Richmond on Saturday. Gallaudet is priming for the game with the Camp Humphreys eleven. Maryland is preparing for Rutgers, while George Washington is getting in shape for Virginia.

Georgetown will have no less than six teams slugging around for more than two hours. According to reports the Hilltoppers have seventy-three candidates in uniform and six more are expected in today.

C. U. Looks Good.

Coach Phil Robb has forty-odd candidates at work, and from indications will have a much speedier eleven than that which took the field last season. The Brooklanders meet Richmond Saturday and are expecting to clean up.

Maryland is coming along at top speed. Coach Byrd is using Pugh and Moore on the ends with gratifying results. In facing Rutgers Saturday Byrd is taking on one of the stiffest of opponents. Rutgers won by a single touchdown last season and according to reports, the Sanford men got much further than the Hilltoppers in their advance than at this time a year ago.

G. W. U. Is Stronger.

While George Washington is not recruited up to full strength as yet, there is no discounting the fact that the Hatchetties are better fortified in all ways than they were a year ago.

The line is heavier, and the backs, while smaller, are faster and in much better condition. George Washington is 100 per cent better off at this time than at the same period a year ago.

Under Bill Quigley, the Hatchetties have begun to get going, and in the last week have shown great progress, both in the matter of team play and in condition. The team to face Virginia has not been selected, but it is safe to say that the line, from tackle to tackle, will average about 194 pounds, which is somewhat bigger than last season.

At the present writing, Locher has been shifted to the backfield from end and Shaw and Ptak are on the flanks. Hawley, Walter, Connolly, Wheeler, Jawish, Barville and Lobdell are being used in the line.

COACH HEGARTY LINES UP TEAM FOR SIGNALS

The Washington Football Club players were put through a stiff workout last evening at American League Park. A few formations and signals were given the men by Coach Hegarty, who seemed well pleased at the showing of his charges. Two more newcomers reported for the first time yesterday—D. McCarthy, of the 1919 Georgetown eleven, and Letzkus, the end from Westminster.

Dowrick, the fast halfback of the Rex A. C. last season, called the signals yesterday and put pep into the squad. He seems determined to gain a job with the pros and things should go his way if he continues his present pace.

NEWBY AT HALF FOR TIGERS IN VARSITY TRIAL

Former Central High Lad Fits in With Garrity, Alford, and Lurie at Princeton.

Dick Newby, Central High School star halfback of two years ago, started off yesterday's work at Princeton University on the football field as varsity halfback. Newby worked with Alford, the former Navy star in the backfield, Don Lurie and Hank Garrity.

The Washington lad gave a first class account of himself and seems destined to fit in as a regular. Stinson and Snively were on the ends, Keck and Hooper were at tackles and Witter and Baker at guards. Lipscomb held down the center position.

The varsity battled the scrubs and the ineligible for half an hour. On defense, the varsity held both teams with ease.

Want Grid Games.

Seaman-Gunner School football players averaging 150 pounds want games. B. W. O'Connell, manager, can be reached at Lincoln 1360, at the receiving ship.

Terminals Want Games.

The Terminal A. C. wants to book a game with an eleven in the 130-pound class for next Sunday. Address John Collier at 211 K street northeast.

Seek's Grid Games.

Crystal A. C. players of Alexandria, Va., weighing 130 pounds, want games with District teams. Manager D. E. Whitestone, 208 South Lee street, Alexandria, Va., can also be reached at Alexandria 158-J.
